Excerpt: . . . 11 clean, renewable, low-cost hydroelectric power to keep our farming affordable. The Snake Columbia River system is the third largest grain corridor in the world. Its the largest transportation corridor for wheat in the United States. Nearly 10 million tons of wheat is shipped down the river annually. Almost 5 million tons of that is put into the barges on the Snake River portion of the system. Eliminating the Snake River dams would devastate the agriculture in eastern Washington and hurt farmers as far away as North Dakota. And it would force many farmers off their land and turn agricultural communities into ghost towns. Those people who say that we can easily replace barges with trucks and rail cars simply havent looked at the facts. A single barge carries as much as 35 railroad cars or as much as 134 semi-trucks. And we would need to have the equivalent of 120, 000 rail cars annually or 700, 000 semi-trucks to replace the barges on the waterway. Thats thousands of trucks crowding the interstate on the way down to Portland. Higher costs, more pollution. Doesnt make sense to me. And even if enough rail cars or trucks existed, the Corps of Engineers has determined that if you drop the river levels, those lines would probably collapse into the river gorge in more than 60 different places. We believe, supported by sound science and years of study by the National Marine Fisheries Service, that we can protect the salmon without destroying the infrastructure that is the centerpiece of eastern Washingtons economy. As you know, between...
