That a grade in writing had no fixed value under the old system of grading, can be easily proven, if old manuscripts are at hand. It will be evident that a grade like 85 is likely to be applied to writing of greatly varying quality. 2. Give a test in handwriting following directions. on pages 25-26, and take the summarized results to the institute for comparison with results in other schools. Note especially the large variation in the number of letters written per minute. This suggests that it is due to the different reaction times for different pupils. What rule will you lay down as to speed of writing? 3. Use the Ayres scale and score the handwriting of your pupils, for...
