What with her parents constant bickering and her failing grades, Annie is sure her world is falling apart and she can forget being accepted at any college. Junior year is a nightmare. The final straw? She is taken out of orchestra and forced to endure an after-school remedial program. Even worse, reoccurring dreams of a colorful sea world, where music floods the senses, plague her. Then the unexpected happens. A single scene in a movie sparks a memory, long buried. Annie is convinced that sometime in her past, she was abducted by aliens and taken up in a spaceship. She needs to talk to someone but who? Who would believe such a bizarre story? She would be mocked or worse, sent away for psychiatric help. Annie s search for the truth about her abduction takes her back to her grandparents isolated cabin in Maine, where, as a small child, the impossible became possible.
