Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: .throttle has been locked wide open by labor union leadership--all the while emptyheaded, loud-mouthed idiots in Washington play the fiddle and dance the jig; occasionally they come to long Copyright, 1919, The American enough to repeal any bit of constructive legislation that may have been put over on them unawares. Steinway raised the wages of their cabinet-makers to Fifty Dollars a week, and soon the gentle darlings struck for a twenty-five percent increase. Motormen on the Westchester line struck for Three Hundred and Fifty Dollars a month, and the public walked while they fought. (Recall what Shonts said about the public?) Two classes are working out the damnation of America at break-neck speed: The Laborer who has sold himself to the union in order to get an exorbitant wage wrhich he cannot earn (and the scorn of mankind, which he is rapidly earning) and the Commercial Manipulator who tacks on a few millions for personal profit--while our lovely senators jabber away at Wilson and pray for a Republican sweep in 1920. For the brick-layer might makes right (for a little season yet) and the public can go to hades while he ties up the building industry of America and the rent profiteer buys a few more automobiles. For the railroad-men might makes right and the public can stay at home and their business go to hades while he clogs the arteries of this great public body of ours. Some day those arteries are going to burst...
