Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: .poor doctor through a rigid cross-examination as to the prognosis of his injured elbow, is one of the seven wonders of the practice of medicine and surgery. The wide range of possibilities in a given case of injury about the elbow and the great responsibility one assumes in the management of such injuries, render the judicious to be critical in his examination and guarded in his prognosis. The elbow is one of the most important joints in the body, and, while its mechanics are simple, the joint is exceedingly complicated in its anatomical relations. There are four anatomical landmarks which one must ever have in mind in dealing with injuries in the vicinity of the elbow. They are the external and internal condyles of the humerus, the olecranon process of the ulna and the head of the radius. The tip of the three bony processes mentioned...
